MY CONTRIBUTION

I photographed Jaehee at an event in Taipei and published a photo post on my fan account. The post pairs close-up portraits with a short event caption and artist hashtags.

CONTENT CHOICES

The photos make the artist the focal point. A date and location give fans context, while English, Korean, and Japanese artist tags make the subject recognizable across languages.

WHAT I TAKE FROM IT

The repost and bookmark counts show that viewers shared and saved the content as well as liking it.

Different moments. A clear audience.

These posts show two sides of the same artist: a styled event appearance and a candid travel moment. Together, they demonstrate how I create varied visual content for a focused fan community.

BEYOND MY OWN ACCOUNTS

PR Intern | China Renaissance, Beijing

During my summer 2026 internship, I supported competitor research, company announcements, and promotional materials. This complemented my social media work with experience in corporate communications.

What I bring to a cohort: original photography, audience awareness, concise copy, and experience connecting creative work with measurable results.

Building an entertainment audience.

Swan Bitcoin

Company research through a communications lens

China Renaissance | PR internship | Summer 2026

THE PROJECT

I prepared a Chinese-language case study on Swan Bitcoin during my PR internship at China Renaissance. The project combined company research with an assessment of how the business could be understood and positioned in communications.

RESEARCH FOCUS

01 Business model & audience

Examining the company's Bitcoin-focused services and the customer groups behind its positioning.

02 Market context & positioning

Considering how the broader Bitcoin market and institutional participation shape the company's narrative.

03 Communications implications

Connecting business and media research to potential communication angles relevant to China Renaissance.

Skills demonstrated: company research, synthesis, positioning analysis, and turning complex subject matter into a structured written brief.

Original deliverable: Chinese-language case study. English project overview above.
